1. Name 3 personal qualities that the protagonist possesses which describe his/her character, and explain why you think they are personal qualities.
2. Does this book depend more on the characters or the plot to hold your interest? Cite evidence in the story to support your opinion.
3. Select an incident from the story that has the most appeal to you. Justify your opinion by stating 3 reasons why you liked it. Or, illustrate the incident, complete with color and your own captions.
4. Did the book end the way you expected it would? Prove your opinion by writing 2 or 3 clues the author gave which made you predict the ending. If the author gave clues that misled you to predict the ending, then write those.
5. Does this book have any sequels? Use a local book catalogue or check with your school librarian to find out. If so, then list them in order. If it does not, then make up and list some new titles and put them in a letter to the author. Though it is not necessary, if the author is still alive, you may send the letter.
6. Did you like the book? Why or why not? Write a part from the book that you either did or did not like which helped you decide.
