1. What part(s) of the book (if any) do you think were best represented in illustrations? Why? What part(s) of the book (if any) do you think would have been better communicated in words rather than pictures? Why?
2. What sort of challenges did the main character(s) have to face? Describe the antagonist/villain and explain whether it was an actual character or another force opposing the protagonist like "one's own fears."
3. If you were writing the story, what would you have done differently? If you were drawing the story, what would you have done differently, regardless of artistic talent?
4. Was the illustrator's art style fitting for this book and story, or do you think a different style of drawing would have served it better? Explain your response.
5. What parts of the graphic novel did you prefer over a regular novel? What parts of the novel would you have preferred to read in a traditional, non-graphic, novel format? Why?
6. Did you enjoy the book? Why or why not?
