

Niemi's 8th Grade Science

4/28 – 5/4

Tuesday, April 28 th	Wednesday, April 29 th	Thursday, April 30 th	Friday, May 1 st	Monday, May the 4 th Be with You
Today we start our unit of Chemistry! I want you to have some background knowledge of chemistry before we really get going, so, to get us started, you will watch a short video by Crash Course called: The Creation of Chemistry . (The underlined title is a link to the video) Once you have watched the video, download the worksheet (from the folder named with this week's date range) with the same title and answer the questions. To show you have answered the questions, you can "highlight" the answer you believe is correct. When saving the worksheet, save with your last name before the original title (Ex. Niemi The Creation of Chemistry). Email me your worksheet when completed.	Today, you will watch a short video by Crash Course called: The Periodic Table . (The underlined title is a link to the video) Once you have watched the video, download the worksheet with the same title and answer the questions. To show you have answered the questions, you can "highlight" the answer you believe is correct. When saving the worksheet, save with your last name before the original title (Ex. Niemi The Periodic Table). Email me your worksheet when completed.	Today, you will watch a short video by Crash Course called: The Nucleus. (The underlined title is a link to the video) Once you have watched the video, download the worksheet with the same title and answer the questions. To show you have answered the questions, you can "highlight" the answer you believe is correct. When saving the worksheet, save with your last name before the original title (Ex. Niemi The Nucleus). Email me your worksheet when completed.	Download the Element Word Search document and find all the element names. You can highlight the names either electronically and resave the document OR print the page and highlight/circle each name. Email me the document when completed.	Complete the Element Word Search given to you on Friday.